A Pamunkey Farm and Negroes for sale.

THE Subscriber offers for sale Ills Farm, in New Kent county, on the Pamunkey River, at its junction with Black Creek, six miles below the Piping Tree, and ten miles from New Kent Court-house. It contains about six hundred acres of LAND, well watered and well timbered, lying very compactly, the several shifts cornering near the barns, so as to save time and labour in taking in the Crops. This Farm is considered by judges to be a very valuable and desirable one, It contains upwards of thirty acres of first-rate Meadow Land, which I have proposed seeding in herds' grass, and have already so seeded a pirt. This Meadow can be considerably increased in size, with very little beloour. All the Land is arable, and the Farm in good order in its fencing, ditches, houses, &c. The Land is generally level, but sufficiently undulating to be easily and effectually drained. There is a Shad and Herring Fishery attached to it, sufficient to suplevel, but sufficiently undulating to be easily and effectually drained. There is a Shad and Herring Fakery attached to it, sufficient to supply the Farm abundantly. A fine Seine and Boat will be sold with it. The Dwelling House is of brick, having seven rooms—and though plain, it is a consfortable one, and is in good condition. The outhouses, such as the kitchen, wash-house, &c., have been recently repaired, and are good and convenient. The negro quarters are all new and very good, and have been newly located, with a view to health and convenience, having a spring of fine water and a supershaud and of freewood year them. The other buildings consist of health and convenience, having a spring of the water and a super-abundance of fire-wood near them. The other buildings consist of an Overseer's House, a large Stable, Carriage-house, Granary, (shed-ded round,) and a capacious Barn, all in good order. There is also an Ice-house. A more minute description is deemed unnecessary. I will sell with my Farm, (if it be desired,) every thing on it, in-cluding Negroes, Household and Kitchen Furniture, Stock, &c. I wish to sell the whole property as it stands—but will separate it, should that be preferred.

article; and in doing this, I shall handle, gloves off, the Wig or Wiggy party, the most extraordinary party that has appeared in this or any other country, since time had a beginning.

It does appear to me, that the confusion in the principal does appear to me, the confusion in the pr

ples of the purty or parties supporting those three gentle-men, is and must be as great as that sent by Heaven to well remembers these facts, and cannot, in justice to the confuse the builders of the extraordinary tower of Babel, and were I to choose which to do, baild Babel, contrary thing but carrying out the principles of 'any man against to the will of Heaven, or be a Wig or Wiggy, and support Wig or Wiggy candidates for the Presidency, I should certainly ask leave of my Maker to do the former, as the less sin of the two, and more conformable to principle if principle has any thing to do with it-as I cannot perceive that it has in the smallest degree-and the only principle that one can perceive is, that of no principle-No, not the least principle in the portentous combinations that I shall depict.

The Wig candidate for the Presidency to the North, is the "Hon. Daniel Webster." We all know Mr. Webster to be a Federalist of the deepest dye. He was a supporter of old John Adams's administration. Mr. Adams advocated the necessity of a standing army in time of, of the U. States, and was in a few weeks thereafter, appeace. He recommended, and a subscritent Congres | pointed Secretary to the North-west Territory-From passed, the adious Alien and Sedition acts, during his administration. Mr. Daniel Webster, the Wig or Wiggy candidate to the North, has ever since danced attendyour vote? It has been truly and sincerely charged, and Territory. There has the secret of his continuing in that as untruly and insucceely denied, that Hugh L. White was brought forward as a tool to aid this mixture of New Light Daniel Websterism .- Yes, a tool, a fool, and a gull, gull the South into the support of the Blue Light Daniel Webster, and Harrison, the follower of the Illus-pecanoe Hero."-I do in my soul believe the following sketch of the "Tippecanoe Hero."-Kentucky, and the West, and the South, if ever such a man is elevated to the Presidential seat, may "mourn in sackcloth and ashes" when it be too late - Yes, "Hecatombs of Kentuckians" have been sacrificed to this man's want of Generalship. Yes, fellow-citizens, in the "Tip-pecanoe Hero," your countrymen have met with many and severe defeats—"and instead of reaping the glory which was due to their valor and intrepidity, they reaped an untimely grave." Such has been the fate of those gallant sons of the West, when under the command of this "Tippecanoe General." Western blood is Virginia blood-Virginia peopled the West-Many a brace and gallant Virginian was sacrificed to his imbeci-lity and irresolution.—Did any one ever know any other arriving in the neighborhood of Tippecanoe, he "caused the army to halt," and requested the interpreter to bring ome of the Indian Chiefs to him. In a few moments, the man who had been with him, made his appearance. et wood and water. He informed me, that there was a creek to the North-west, which he thought would suit our purpose. I immediately despatched two officers to examine it, and they reported the situation was excellent."-He then took leave of the chief-and "I found the ground destined for the encampment not such as I would wish. It was admirably calculated for regular troops-but it afforded great facilities for the approach of sarages."- Was there ever any thing like this before, Yes; so great was the facility, that his army was attacked whilst asleep the next morning.—Mr. Humphrey Marshall, a brother of Chief Justice Marshall, a talented and brave man, though in the Opposition, soon after the battle of Tippecance, says, "In Gov. Harrison's second official letter, dated 15th November"—(the battle was fought on the 7th Nov.)-after stating that the battle began on the left flank, he says "that the first notice of which the troops savages within a short distance of the line; but, even under those circumstances, they were not wanting to themselves on the occasion;" or, in other words, they did of them," says he, that were awake," or easily awakened, raised their arms and took their stations: others, who were tridy, had to contend with their enemies at the doors of their tents. —This was the battle of "Old Tippecanoe." Great and merciful Heaven! His friends had etter never have mentioned the name of "Tippecanoe." The battle of Tippecanoe would have been a disgrace to any General, much less to so "brave a General," who had never fought a battle "in glory," but whose course and desperate savage, and his brave officers and men "had to contend with them at the doors of their tents."—This is the military chieftain, whom, in contempt of the understanding the contend with the contend to the doors of the understanding the contend to the doors of the understanding the contend to th ings of the People, they, the Wigs, have brought out as their candidate for the Presidency-A man, whom, as a military man, or of any account, politically, his pretenwhen sifted, the people will view with scorn and contempt-yes, with highly merited scorn and contempt. This is the battle of Tippecanoe-where Virginia and Kentucky blood flowed in torrents, from the want of mi-

ground, and contains so just and accurate a statement of the truth, that I give it without further comment: "Kentucky.-This State is claimed by the friends of Harrison as certain to east its vote in his favor, because, as they say, he has led them oft in battles in which they have gathered glory for themselves and their posterity and that they will never desert their old General. How stands the true issue? Has he any just claims to the support of Kentuckians? He has, if wantonly strewing the battle-fields with their best blood gives him any. Instead of leading them in valorous achievements, have they not been, like so many beeves, slaughtered to ap pease the manes of Harrison's comity towards every of-ficer against whom the least dislike lurked in his boson, or who seemed destined to colopse him? Yes, the valor of Kentucky has always been the victim of the ebullition of malice and envy, which was continually forcing itself from their commander. We cannot think that Kentuckians, when they look back at the valor and talents which have been forever lost to them, and which, if a "military chieftain" had been their leader, would now be adorning the legislative halls of our country, an ornament to them selves and their native State, can go for the Hero. In every battle in which he engaged the Kentuckians, they perished in hecatombs, and gained no glory. At Tippeca-noe, the grited Davies and Colonel Owen, and the brave mess under them, were sacrificed, because the General lacked sense to select his own camping ground, and took the advice of the Indians. At river Raisin, Colonels Allen, Simpson, Hart, Hickman, and their gallant companions, were massacred, because Harrison treacherously failed to send the expected reinforcements, which would have saved the army. But the success of Gen. Win-chester would have been a total discomfiture of Harrison's plans, and perhaps might have thrown him into the shades of retirement. The butchery of the Kentuckians under Dudley, at Fort Meigs, was another result of his Generalship. Croghan conquered against his orders, and Shelby pushed him on to the Thames, where the Hartford Conventionist, Daniel Webster.

This man of the Wigs, recollect, my fellow-citizens, raised, as I stated before, under a pretext of war with France, but in fact, to overawe the States, and the Republican party. This same John Adams, about this time, made use of this memorable expression, and he was backed by this same William Henry Harrison, in keeping up this army, "that there was a faction in Virginia, who ught to be ground in dust and ashes, before the frowns of their injured and insulted country!" Who were this faction, my fellow-citizens:-It was our illustrious Jefferson, and Giles, and Madison, and Monroe, and Randolph, then a Republican. This was the faction which the detestable John the 1st, said, ought to be "ground in dust and ashes. '-Yes, the noble Republican Phalanx of Virginia, the noblest of the noble-and yet this protege of John the 1st, is brought forward before you as a can didate for the Presidency,-and the Wig party, professing State Right principles, are his best friends, but in fact they are Bank of the U. States. Do you not understand these Wigs now? Are your eyes not opened? But they say, I will vote for Hugh L. White; now the Harrison and the White ticket is the same, identically-twins,

" Having no vote," says he, "I did not think proper to take part in the discussion of any of the great questions that divided the two political parties."-Here is a misstate ment-gross misstatement. He made a speech in favor of the Standing Army-and made, no doubt, for the purpose of escape; but he failed. Mr. Randolph was too pointed-I subjoin the following just and indignant remarks, taken from the Indiana Mercury.—It is boldy charged, that at the "River Raisin" Cols. Allen, Simpson, Hart.
